The Office of President

The office of President of Ireland (Uachtarán na hÉireann) was established by the Constitution in 1937. The President takes precedence over all other persons in the State and exercises powers and functions conferred by the Constitution and by law. The functions include:

- appointment of the Taoiseach on the nomination of the Dáil;
- appointment of the other members of the Government on the nomination of the Taoiseach with the previous approval of the Dáil;
- acceptance of the resignation or termination of the appointment of a member of the Government on the advice of the Taoiseach;
- summoning or dissolution of the Dáil on the advice of the Taoiseach (but the President may refuse to dissolve the Dáil on the advice of a Taoiseach who has ceased to retain the support of a majority in the Dáil);
- signature of Bills passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas (but the President may, following consultation with the Council of State, refer a Bill to the Supreme Court for a ruling on its constitutionality. Following a petition by a majority of the Seanad and at least one-third of the Dáil and following consultation with the Council of State, the President may decline to sign a Bill until the will of the people on it has been ascertained by referendum or general election);
- the exercise of the supreme command of the Defence Forces;
- exercise of the right of pardon and power to remit punishment imposed by a court of criminal jurisdiction;

following consultation with the Council of State, communicating with the Houses of the Oireachtas on a matter of national or public importance or addressing a message to the people.

Under the Constitution, the functions of the President, with specified exceptions, are performable only on the advice of the Government.

In the performance of the functions of the office, the President is not answerable to either House of the Oireachtas or to any court. The Constitution, however, lays down a procedure under which the President may be impeached for stated misbehaviour.

How the President is elected

Who can vote

Every citizen of Ireland who is at least 18 years of age and whose name is entered in the register of electors for a constituency is entitled to vote at a presidential election in that constituency. The register of electors is prepared each year by county and city councils.

Who can be a candidate

Every citizen of Ireland who has reached the age of 35 years is eligible for election to the office of President. A person who holds or has held office as President is eligible for re-election once only.

Who can nominate

A candidate must be nominated by either (a) not less than 20 members of the Dáil and/or Seanad or (b) at least four county and/or city councils. A member of the Oireachtas or a county or city council may not nominate more than one candidate at the same election. A former or the retiring President may nominate himself or herself as a candidate. Nominations must be on a nomination paper prescribed by law and must be delivered to the presidential returning officer by 12 noon on the last day for receiving nominations.

When must an election take place

A presidential election must take place within the sixty days before the expiration of the term of office of the outgoing President. If a vacancy occurs before the completion of a normal term of office, the election takes place within 60 days after the occurrence of the vacancy. On, or as soon as convenient after, the sixtieth day before the expiration of the term of office of the outgoing President (or after the occurrence of a vacancy), the Minister for the Environment, Community and Local Government makes an order appointing the last day for receiving nominations and the day and hours of polling. The Minister also makes an order appointing a person to be the presidential returning officer.

Ruling on nominations

At 3.00 p.m. on the last day for receiving nominations, the presidential returning officer rules on the validity of the nomination papers received. Every prospective candidate or his or her representative must attend at the ruling on nominations and is required to furnish all relevant information required by the presidential returning officer or the judicial assessor, who is either the President of the High Court or some other judge of the High Court nominated by the President of the High Court. Any question arising at the ruling on nominations may be referred to the judicial assessor.

The function of the judicial assessor is to furnish an opinion on any matter referred to him/her. The presidential returning officer is obliged to have regard to that opinion. A candidate or his/her authorised representative may appeal to the High Court against the ruling of the presidential returning officer on the validity of a nomination or in relation to the qualification of a candidate.

Withdrawal of candidature

A candidate may withdraw their candidature at any time before the completion of the ruling on nominations but not thereafter. A candidature is withdrawn by delivering a notice to this effect, signed by the candidate or his or her representative, to the presidential returning officer. If no candidate stands nominated or if all candidates withdraw, the proceedings in relation to the election commence afresh. If only one candidate stands nominated, the presidential returning officer declares that candidate elected. If two or more candidates stand nominated, a poll is taken.

The candidate's agents

Each candidate is required to appoint an election agent for the purposes of accounting for expenditure incurred by or on behalf of the candidate at the election and for making disclosure of substantial donations received by the candidate. The appointment of the election agent by the candidate, who may be the candidate himself or herself, must be made no later than the last day for receiving nominations and be notified to the presidential returning officer. An election agent is required to furnish to the Standards in Public Office (SIPO), not later than the fifty-sixth day following polling day, a statement detailing all donations exceeding €634.87 received by or on behalf of the candidate and a statement of expenses incurred in connection with the election which must be supported by a statutory declaration.

The Electoral (Amendment) Act 2011 provides for the limitation of expenditure at a presidential election to €750,000 per candidate and for the recoupment of expenses up to €200,000 in the case of candidates who exceed one quarter of the quota.

A candidate or the election agent may appoint one local agent for each Dáil constituency to assist the candidate in the constituency and to act as deputy in the constituency for the election agent. A candidate or the election agent or the local agent may appoint for each polling district in a constituency one deputy local agent to assist the candidate in the polling district and to act as deputy for the candidate's election agent and local agent in the polling district. An appointment of a local agent or deputy local agent must be notified in writing to the local returning officer for the constituency by the person making the appointment.

A candidate or the election agent or a local agent may appoint a personation agent to attend at each polling station in the constituency to assist in the detection of personation. A candidate, election agent or local agent may also appoint persons to attend at the issue of postal ballot papers, at the opening of the postal ballot boxes and at the counting of the votes in the constituency. Agents representing the candidates may also be present at the ascertainment of the result of the election by the presidential returning officer.

Free postage for candidates

Each candidate is entitled to send by post, free of charge, one election letter to each elector on the register of electors.

The poll

Polling day is appointed by order of the Minister for the Environment, Community and Local Government and this order also fixes the period for voting. At least twelve hours within the period between 7.00 a.m. and 10.30 p.m. must be allowed for voting. The poll on islands may be taken on any one of the five days before the appointed polling day and the period allowed for polling on an island may be reduced to four hours.

Postal voting is available to the Gárda Síochána (police force), Defence Forces and to civil servants (and their spouses or partners) attached to Irish missions abroad, as well as to electors living at home who are unable to vote at a polling station due to a physical illness or physical disability and electors unable to vote at their polling station due to circumstances of their detention in a prison due to an order of the court. Postal voting is also available to electors whose occupations are likely to prevent them from voting at their local polling station (including full-time students registered at home who are living elsewhere while attending an educational institution in the State).

Special voting is available to electors living in hospitals, nursing homes or similar institutions who are unable to vote at a polling station due to a physical illness or disability. The ballot paper is brought to them in the institution and they vote in the presence of a special presiding officer accompanied by a Garda.

For the purpose of a presidential election the country is generally divided into the same constituencies as for a Dáil election. The person who is the Dáil returning officer for a constituency (i.e. the sheriff or county registrar) is the local returning officer for the constituency at a presidential election. The local returning officer is charged with the conduct of the election in the constituency. Electors vote at the same polling stations as for a Dáil election and each elector is sent a polling information card containing information on the elector's number on the register of electors, the date of the poll and the place where he/she is entitled to vote. Polling stations are usually located in schools or other public buildings. The local returning officer appoints a presiding officer to preside at each polling station and a poll clerk to assist the presiding officer.

Voting system

The President is elected by the direct vote of the people. Voting is by secret ballot by means of the single transferable vote. This system enables the elector to indicate his or her first and subsequent choices on the ballot paper. The form of ballot paper is prescribed by law. The names of candidates appear in alphabetical order on the ballot paper which also contains brief instructions on the correct manner of voting. The ballot paper does not disclose the political affiliation, if any, of the candidates. The ballot paper may also contain a photograph of the candidate in accordance with regulations made by the Minister for the Environment, Community and Local Government. Each ballot paper is stamped with an official mark at the time of issue to establish its authenticity and a serial number is printed in small characters on the back of each paper. If a ballot paper does not bear the official mark or if anything is marked or written on it by which the voter could be identified, it will be declared invalid at the count and rejected.

Method of voting

In the polling station the elector applies for a ballot paper by stating his or her name and address. The elector may be required to produce evidence of identity. Where the presiding officer is satisfied as to the elector's identity, a ballot paper is stamped with the official mark and the ballot paper is handed to the elector. The presiding officer places a mark opposite the name of the elector on the register to show that the elector has received a ballot paper. The elector marks the ballot paper in secret in a voting compartment, folds the paper to conceal how the paper has been marked and places it in the ballot box. The presiding officer may order the arrest of any person suspected of committing electoral offences. Persons who are blind, incapacitated or illiterate and cannot vote without help may be assisted by the presiding officer or by a companion.

The counting of votes

The counting of the votes is carried out entirely in the constituencies. The presidential returning officer ascertains and declares the result of the election on the basis of the reports furnished to him/her by the local returning officers for the individual constituencies. The candidates may be present or represented at the ascertainment of the results by the presidential returning officer and may require a complete reexamination and recount of all the votes cast at the election.

The first count is carried out by the local returning officer in each constituency and the results notified to the presidential returning officer who calculates the quota. If a candidate reaches the quota on the first count he/she will be declared elected; if not, the presidential returning officer directs the exclusion of the lowest candidate(s). The votes of the excluded candidate(s) are transferred by the local returning officers and the results notified to the presidential returning officer. The process of exclusion of candidates and transfer of their votes will continue until a candidate can be declared elected.

Presidential Election Petitions

The result of an election may be questioned by way of petition to the High Court. A petition may only be presented with the leave of the Court on application made, not later than 7 days after the declaration of the result of the election. Leave to present a petition may be sought by the Director of Public Prosecutions, a candidate or his/her election agent. The grounds of petition are limited to electoral offences, obstruction of the election or mistake or other irregularity likely to have effected the result.

Taking up office

The presidential returning officer notifies the name and address of the President elect to the outgoing President, the Taoiseach, the Chief Justice, the Chairman of Dáil Éireann, the Chairman of Seanad Éireann and the Secretary to the President. The new President enters on office on the day following the expiration of the term of office of the outgoing President and holds office for seven years from that date.
